L7 eyes off more govt deals

L7 Solutions' new three-year, multi-million dollar contract with the Department of Health for upgrades of rural and remote site infrastructure is just the start of various government opportunities the company has in its sights. Under the contract, the IT services and solution provider will supply Cisco network infrastructure for the WA Country Health Service.

L7 Solutions chief executive Matt Sullivan said the contract was firmly in-line with his company's continuing focus on the WA market.

"We are ecstatic to be working with the WA Country Health Service on this contract as it's been a long time coming for the upgrading of these remote regional areas," he said.

Initial funding has been made available under the Department of Broadband, Communication and the Digital Economy, Clever Networks (Round 2) Program with matched state government funding designed to enhance innovative health service delivery via broadband technology.

Mr Sullivan said the government would end up spending between $2 million and $3 million in the first year of the contract, with this spend to increase over the term of the contract.

"One of key focuses for us over the last six to 12 months has been driving government work," he said.

"And we're on the cusp of announcing on some other big wins with other government agencies," he said.
